The University of Worcester's Religion and Society Research Group and the Society for Educational Studies are hosting a joint symposium on May 12th (12pm start) and 13th (1pm finish) 2022.

The aims of the event are to:

- Promote debate and research on contemporary issues on matters of faith and education in historical perspective.
- Consider and promote research which evaluates afresh the historic contribution made by the faith communities to educational policies and practices.
- Promote renewed debate and research on the contribution made by the faith communities to religious education in publicly-funded schools in historical perspective.

The symposium, including accommodation and meals, is fully-funded for members of the Society for Education Studies. Spaces are limited and allocated on a first-come, first-served basis, preference also being given to those offering to give a paper. Reverend Nigel Genders' public lecture at Worcester Cathedral is also open to non-members and available to book.
